Cary Audio announces the new DMS-650 and DMS-800 PV, which now bookends the popular DMS-700 network audio player.

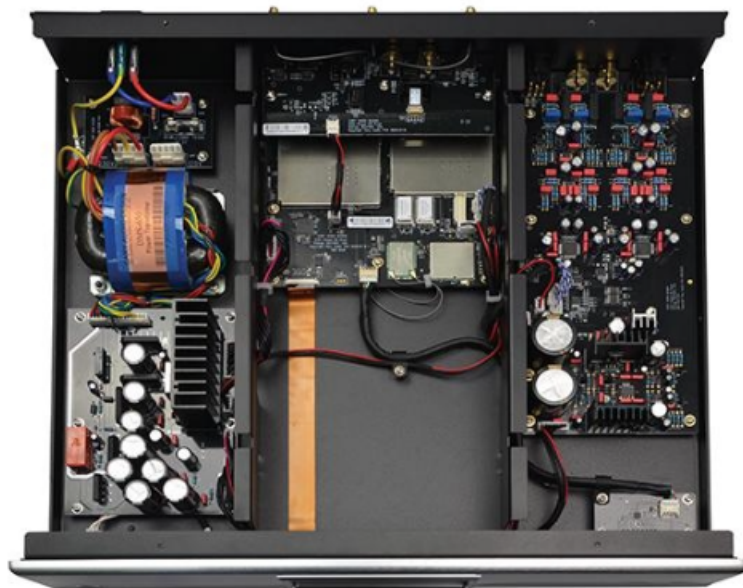

Cary Audio's new DMS-650 replaces the DMS-550, while the DMS-800 Professional Version is now the range-topping digital player. According to the North Carolina-based brand, these are the result of the "various needs and desires of customers".

First up is the DMS-650 Network Audio Player, which now becomes the entry-level point to the DMS platform. That said, it is based around a pair of AK4497EQ Verita DACs, making it capable of native 32-bit / 768kHz PCM and DSD 512. It's also Roon Ready and MQA Certified.

Furthermore, the DMS-650 allows streaming from TIDAL, Qobuz, Spotify, Spotify Connect, vTuner, or files stored on a network computer or NAS Drive.

You also get three USB-A ports for listening from connected USB hard drives, flash drives, and even from an SD card. As an extra measure for convenience, the DMS-650 also includes aptX HD input and output as well as Airplay.
